MOUNTAIN RICH AS FARM CENTER

Dirtseller, Once Refuge of Criminals and Haunt of Varmints, Converted.

(Special to The News.)
Lyerly, Ga., Jan. 8.—Not many years ago the north Georgia mountains offered refuge to criminals of every conceivable type and varmints of every kind inhabited them, but in the present day there is no attraction, the past twenty-five years bringing about great changes in the mountainous country. Years ago there was practically no form of human habitation on certain sections of the mountains, but now they are dotted here and there with little cottages, and only in the very remotest ravines of the mountains have the outlaws any chance to escape the toils of the law. Vast changes have occurred in the mountainous country and probably during the next few years the mountains will be thickly settled. No longer are the mountain residents looked down upon as "mountain hoosiers" or "mountaineers," for some of the country's best citizens have taken up their abode on the mountains. One cause of this is from the fact that huge deposits of valuable minerals are to be found and a good living awaits the operators of the mines. Also the fertile land for farming is a big inducement, and it is not a rare thing to gather a bale of cotton to the acre or a hundred bushels of corn. The mining business is being carried on in Dirtseller mountain under the supervision of James L. Wilson, of Lyerly, on an extensive scale. While the ore is not as easily raised as in earlier years, it is to be found in abundance. A branch railroad from the main line of the Central of Georgia at Lyerly extends to the foot of Dirtseller, and the ore is loaded there on freight cars and shipped to the furnace for melting into metal.

When this branch railroad was built several years ago the mining operations were then on a boom and hundreds of tons of ore was mined daily and sent across the mountain in train cars constructed especially for the purpose and dumped automatically into freight cars at the foot of the incline. Dirtseller mountain had then grown in population to such an extent that the little mountain village was named Colvinton, after Capt. L. S. Colyar, of Chattanooga, one of the promoters and at present owner of much of the valuable mining sections of the mountain. Hundreds of acres of rich land was cleared on the mountain top and set out in fruit trees and strawberry plants and in a few years the gathering of these fruits caused the mountain to be swamped by persons seeking employment, people coming from as far as 100 miles from every direction, attracted by the good wages paid laborers and at the same time when the farmers were at leisure in their crops and were glad to get the extra work to do. The company shipped the first class fruit to northern markets and operated their own canning plant on the mountain and all over-ripe fruit was canned. These operations continued up until a few years ago when the orchards were turned into cotton and cornfields, after a few years of almost total failure with the orchards. The activities on the mountain were then quelled to a certain extent and in a few years the mining operations were nearly altogether abandoned, because of the depth of the ore from the surface, making the raising very difficult. The incline used to transport the ore across the mountain was torn up and about all the noise that could be heard was the "gee" and "haw" yells from the farmers. The mountain yearly produces a fine crop of cotton, corn and other farm products and there is yet a very valuable tract in fruit trees and berries. The mining operations now being carried on are nothing compared with those of fifteen years ago. The ore is now being

SAVE YOUR HAIR AND BEAUTIFY IT WITH "DANDERINE"

Spend a few cents! Dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Try this! Hair gets beautiful, wavy and thick in few moments.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fatten, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.
If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents; apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.
We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—(Adv.)

mined at various places on the mountain and it is necessary to haul the ore to the foot of the mountain in wagons to be loaded onto freight cars.
Old Dirtseller has furnished many exciting raids for revenue men. Revenue officers occasionally take a trip to the mountain seeking "wildcats," but these are not plentiful in past years, from the fact that the operators of such stills have been hunted down and taught lessons in the country. Another reason is that no sections of the mountain are remote as in previous years and only occasionally does a still operate any length of time until captured by the revenue men.

Many an exciting fox and coon race has taken place on old Dirtseller. The old abandoned tunnels and crevices between huge rocks on the mountain-side furnish a safe hiding place for old Brer Fox and Mr. Coon and the lovers of such sport can have their hearts' wish fulfilled most any night by taking their hounds out to the mountainside, when the hounds soon strike out on a hot trail and nine times out of ten from the north end of the mountain to the southern end and vice versa until the fox has had a good evening's exercise, when he calmly bids the dogs goodnight and peacefully retires in his safe den. No one has ever been able to play a trick on the wise old fox, for he has his regular haunts and has led many a foxhound in a merry chase up and down the roughest part of the mountain. The dogs very often bay the fox after a several hours' chase, and this greatly encourages the hunters and they light out to "get their prey," but, lo! when they see his den, they leave in disgust and the wise old fox waits for the next party to catch him, if they can.
In one of the old abandoned tunnels on the side of the mountain was where valuable papers belonging to the Bank of Lyerly were found following the robbery of that bank on Jan. 30, 1914, after bloodhounds had trailed the robbers there. Over $4,000 was taken from the bank safe, which was never recovered, and it was generally believed that the money was hidden far back in the old tunnel.

NO PROMOTIONS OR DEMOTIONS

In Tennessee Artillery or Infantry—Death of O. D. Yarbrough, of Lawrenceburg.

Greenville, S. C., Jan. 7.—One death was reported at Camp Sevier Saturday. Clarence D. Yarbrough, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., died of broncho-pneumonia.

The backbone of the cold that has prevailed here for three weeks, with snow on the ground for ten days, is apparently broken with the rising temperature.

Recommendation of the American war mission that troops be sent to France as rapidly as possible will not result in any change in the general plan of training the soldiers of the Thirtieth division at Camp Sevier, it was made known Saturday.

It was learned from the headquarters of the One Hundred and Seventeenth infantry that no report is available for publication concerning the investigation of the mystery surrounding the death of Private Andrew Smith, of Lacon, Tenn., who died of a fracture of the skull inflicted in an unknown manner.

Statement was made that there have been no promotions or demotions in the Tennessee artillery or infantry outfit in the past two days.

Further proof that this war is to be settled by artillery was attached to the records of Saturday when a picked eleven from the One Hundred and Fifteenth and One Hundred and Fourteenth field artillery regiments from Tennessee subdued the powerful line-up from the One Hundred and Fifth sanitary train by the score of 21 to 6, and thereby won the handsome "commodore" trophy cup awarded by Vanderbilt university for the football championship of the division.

A more beautiful bouquet could hardly be presented to any gridiron star than that which was handed to Stawney Latham, of Memphis, by Lieut. Grantland Jamieson, sport writer, in his written version of the game.
